Gaza missionary focusing on silence

Becky Walker came to Gaza, amid the noise of violence, to focus on the silence. In the heart of Gaza, Mrs. Walker says nothing but talks to a group of children — with fast-moving hands, an expressive face and lots of love.

The dark-eyed children beam back at her, quickly signing responses to her questions and asking others. If sign language were audible, the air would be thick with chatter.

In two years, Mrs. Walker has made a difference in the lives of scores of deaf Palestinians. She and her husband, Dennis, a theological teacher and business manager, are serving in Gaza through the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board's International Service Corps.

While most newcomers to Gaza spend at least two years learning Arabic, Mrs. Walker was able to communicate with deaf Palestinians within a couple of hours using sign language. "Fortunately, signing is based on the face, and faces are the same all over the world," she said.

At the Atfaluna Society for Deaf Children, the first deaf school in Gaza, Mrs. Walker has helped establish a program teaching instructors how to sign. She also has helped families with deaf children.

Atfaluna, a privately funded charity founded in 1992 by a group of women health care and educational professionals, now has 122 deaf children enrolled. It offers a wide range of services for the deaf, including special education, vocational training, hearing aids and family services.

Atfaluna is one of many helping ministries springing up as the Palestinian people struggle to create a nation out of refugee camps.

About 15,000 deaf people live in Gaza, says Atfaluna director Gerry Shawa. That's a high percentage for the estimated 800,000 Palestinians who call the Gaza Strip home.

Deafness is most often caused by marriage within family groups, but other leading causes are related to the perpetual poverty of the Palestinians. Parents often cannot afford treatment for their children's simple ear infections. Meningitis, another poverty-related malady, also leaves many children handicapped.

The deaf often are poorly understood and shunned in Palestinian culture.

"Deafness has a great social stigma attached to it, as does any kind of disability," said Mrs. Shawa, an American who has lived in Gaza 25 years with her Palestinian husband.

One woman told Mrs. Walker recently that when she learned her child was deaf she wished he would die. Little is known here about deafness, which means parents usually are unable to communicate with their deaf children. Sign language is not common. The deaf in Gaza seldom learn to read and write.

From the beginning Mrs. Walker has involved deaf people in her work at Atfaluna and pushed for deaf people to become teachers. "We must empower them to be independent and build their self-esteem," she says. "If kids can see deaf people teaching, it gives them hope." (BF)

Anthem song Carry The Light

The Foreign Mission Board expresses appreciation to Alabama hosts for hosting tonight's missionary appointment service. The flags in the civic center this evening are symbolic of those countries where missionaries reside. The gray flags represent the 1.2 billion people who have little or no access to the gospel. Southern Baptists have been sending missionaries overseas since 1845. This is the second of five appointment services scheduled in 1995. The 58 individuals appointed tonight bring the total to more than 100 missionaries serving in 133 countries and assisting in 22 others. Missionaries serve in a variety of vocations, but all are involved in evangelism that results in churches. If you want more information about missionary service, contact the Foreign Mission Board, P.O. Box 6767, Richmond, VA 23230-0767.
